Andrés Abrigo

BIOGRAPHY

Andrés Abrigo is a Chilean producer whose work moves away from beat-making and towards ambient and experimental composition. The piece, not the track, is the minimum unit of his practice.

His initial explorations —documented on social media and SoundCloud— combine drum machine, bass, trumpet and pianos in atmospheric pieces that privilege duration and detail over rhythmic impact. The project's internal tag, post-tempo, condenses an intention: to leave the grid of closed time signatures to compose in more open temporalities.

The body of work in progress under PHŌNÉ Records includes eight studio stems currently in development — Cumbia Andino, Dos, Ensayo Ansiedad, Post Dub Jam, Sábanas, Simple, Uno and Útero— that will be curated into his debut EP.

The register moves between ambient, downtempo, post-dubstep and hybrid forms resisting clean classification. Fine-grain atmospheres, dense basses, filtered trumpets, prepared pianos and sequences prioritising breathing over repetition. Each piece is written as a unique object, not as a DJ-set track.

The project is developed under PHŌNÉ Records' creative direction, with support on sound assembly, arrangements and art direction. The connection with the rest of the roster is indirect —they share an ecosystem rather than sessions— and opens the possibility for cross-dialogues with Ecamhi (trumpet) or Klaus B (winds) in future recordings.

The 2026 schedule contemplates sketches of five tracks as a first milestone (August) and mixing and mastering projected for September. The debut EP will function as the artist's public introduction under the label, with visual and editorial materials produced in parallel.
